

AACT Kitt Scholarship

The American Association of Candy Technologists (AACT) has announced that Allison Brenner has been selected to receive the 2022 – 2023 John Kitt Memorial Scholarship.

Allison Brenner

Brenner is a senior at Texas A&M University studying food science and technology. She is active in the food science club, and was club president last year. This year, she is the vice president of chapter engagement for the IFT Student Association. Last summer, she completed a product development internship with Unilever in New Jersey. After graduation, she plans on working in the food industry as a product developer or as a production leader.

The scholarship is given in memory of honored candy technologist, John Kitt, who passed away in 2009. He had worked at Kraft, Nabisco, Standard Brands and Knechtel Laboratories. Kitt shared his knowledge with the confectionery industry through talks and articles. Applications for the 2023 – 2024 scholarship will open in the spring.

AACT is a professional group of individuals dedicated to the advancement of the confectionery industry and its interests.

aactcandy.org/awards-scholarships/john-kitt-memorial-scholarship